Centre Manager Comments

"The RAF recognises that a large number of recruits are keen to gain civilian qualifications whilst completing their military training. At the Central Air Traffic Control School our apprenticeship programme gives them the opportunity to do this, initially on the FOAC and then in the workplace. All registration and certification fees are paid for and apprentices are supported throughout their 18 month training period both in the school and after they graduate."

Apprentice Comments

"My apprenticeship programme has allowed me to get some civilian qualifications at the same time as doing my RAF training. I have improved my Key Skills and qualified for a pay rise when I completed the apprenticeship, which was great!"

"It was really useful to refresh old skills and learn new ones during Key Skills. The staff provided all the guidance and support I needed to complete my apprenticeship".
