AIR ATTACKS ON GERMANY - 1945

The information in this document has been taken, with a few exceptions, from German reports made at the time of or shortly after the attacks and most of the major raids have been dealt with as far as availability of source material permits.

As in previous such documents a Location and a Chronological Index are attached as Appendix A and B respectively and at Appendix C is a full translation of the Final Report by the Police President on the raid on Wiesbaden on 2/3 February.

It is pointed out that the selection of raids in this and the previous documents dealing with earlier years of the war was made largely on the basis of bomb loads dropped and the number of aircraft participating. It is however appreciated that a number of raids, smaller in terms of bomb loads and aircraft engaged, were carried out but have found no place in these documents but which in their effect were of great importance. If details of any such raid are required, every effort will be made to supply them on the receipt of such a request.

About 500 aircraft of all Bomber Groups except 8, and divided into 2 attacking groups, penetrated W. Germany for what is referred to as the heaviest daylight raid on the town of Essen. Some 1100 bombs were dropped altogether on Essen at about 1500 hours and the following is a translation of a report of the Works Chief ARP Warden of Krupps:

"Very severe damage mainly in the southern and central areas of the Steel works. In the northern part, north of Pferdebahnstrasse, several plants suffered only medium damage. In all some 800 H.E. bombs were dropped, of which a large number were of very heavy calibre and numerous mines. Several plants were completely destroyed by these heavy hits. Very severe damage was also caused to the power network so that production even in the less damaged plants has been brought to a complete standstill. Destruction was very severe also in the works railway network as well as the rolling stock and locomotive park. As a result of the failure of water supplies and because the works roads were completely impassable fires were inadequately dealt with. Casualties amounted to 8 dead, 15 severely injured and many slightly injured."

At Essen Central Station damage came to 70% in the booking offices, 100% at both the goods and express goods offices.

Wiesbaden,
5 February 1945

Final Report on the Air Attack on Wiesbaden of 2 February, 1945

Date and duration of the attack:

2/3 February 1945;
2324 to 0010 hours.

Area of Attack:

The entire city and the suburbs of West Biebrich, Schierstein, Dotzheim, Frauensstein, Sonnenberg, Rambach, Bierstadt, Kloppenheim, Igstadt and Erbenheim.

After the alert had been given the city was approached by streams of bombers from the south-west, west and north-east at about 2320 hours. About 300 - 350 enemy aircraft carried out a "terror" attack and, after several target-marker bombs had been dropped, the main load was released from about 5,000 metres through unbroken cloud.

Bombs Dropped:

High explosive: 1,005 (500 and 1,000 American pounds)
including 107 dud or delayed-action bombs. Some of these exploded about 24 hours later. Five disposal squads of the local civil defence organisation and an armourer artificer from GAF station Darmstadt were employed in dealing with the unexploded bombs. Forty-one bombs were cleared and disarmed by 5 February.

Mines: 61

Stick incendiaries: 38,300 Some of these contained an explosive charge, causing injuries to those engaged in fire-fighting.

Miscellaneous: Leaflets were also dropped. A bundle weighing about 50 kg was found in the 8th Civil Defence Sector.

The number of injured who sought medical assistance on their own initiative or were brought in by the Selbstschutz has not yet been established. (Note: Selbstschutz = individual protection, a system according to which the inhabitants of every house in Germany had to run their own C.D. and recruit their own C.D. staff). The hospitals cannot give exact figures at present. About 200 more injured arrived, increasing the total to about 725.

The local C.D. organisation employed the following in rescuing people trapped by rubble: about 1,000 men on 3 February, about 700 men on 4 February and about 600 men on 5 February. In addition, the Party and the Selbstschutz provided groups which also carried out exemplary rescue work by day and night.

In all, 400 people were missing after the raid. Of these, rescue workers found 22 alive and 58 dead on 3 February, 37 dead on 4 February and 20 dead on 5 February. At present about 200 people are still missing. The injuries of those recovered dead were so severe that death must have been instantaneous. The majority were crushed by rubble. A sound detector was used wherever damage had occurred.

The workshops were also damaged by fire. Track repairs were completed by 1800 hours on 3rd February. At Wiesbaden-Dotzheim railway station 30 metres of track was destroyed by a high explosive bomb. Repair work was completed by 1800 hours on 3rd February.

At Eiserne Hand railway station about 30 metres of track No. 1 was destroyed by a high explosive bomb. Track No. 2 was used to keep trains running. The damage was repaired by 1500 hours on 5th February. A shuttle service was operated between Wiesbaden-Dotzheim and Bad Schwalbach.

Tracks on the line Wiesbaden Main - Niederlahnstein were damaged or destroyed for about 120 metres (3 HE bombs) between Wiesbaden South and West Schierstein (at Km 41). Traffic was halted until the evening of 3rd February, when single-line traffic started. A shuttle service was operated between West Schierstein and Niederlahnstein.

The operations building and the station house at Wiesbaden-Waldstrasse station were hit by incendiaries and badly damaged.

High explosive bombs caused considerable damage to roads throughout the city, particularly in the central area. Traffic will be diverted until the damage has been repaired.

(e) Supply Installations

Incendiary and high explosive bombs caused considerable damage to public supply installations.

Electricity Supply:

The power station in Wiesbaden was not damaged in the raid. At present only the shortage of coal threatens to bring about a stoppage. The whereabouts of coal trains on the way to the power station is not known. To bridge the gap the Regional Economics Office has requisitioned coal from a local industry. The Reichsbahn will undertake the transportation of the coal to the power station. Power transmission from the Main power stations has broken down. Lines have been damaged to a considerable extent and at present it is not known how long repairs will take. The Wiesbaden power station can provide the city only with a greatly reduced electricity supply. Strict economy in the use of electricity by the public is absolutely essential. A number of main cables serving the centre of the city and many secondary cables and distribution installations were severely damaged. During the afternoon of 3rd February parts of the western area of Wiesbaden and of the central area were again provided with electricity. Further areas of the city were connected during 4th February. Electricity will not be available throughout the city until all damaged installations have been repaired, probably by 10th February.

Gas Supply:

At the gasworks two gasometers were hit by high explosive and incendiary bombs. The contents of the gasometers were burnt, but the gasometers themselves can still be repaired. The control room was completely gutted. The furnaces are still in order, but owing to the gasometers being damaged gas supplies cannot be resumed for the time being. Supply would have been discontinued shortly in any event owing to coal shortage. No fuel gas can be supplied until the damage has been repaired.

R E S T R I C T E D

Water Supply:

Owing to the power failure the efficiency of the West Schierstein pumping station was reduced. It was in full working order again by the afternoon of 3rd February. Bombs severely damaged the main pipelines from the Taunus water catchments to the reservoirs and those from the reservoirs to the city and Biebrich. In addition, secondary pipelines and house mains in Wiesbaden were badly damaged at many points. As a result of this damage to the water supply system the reservoirs emptied very quickly and shortly after the raid there were no water reserves available to fight fires. Starting from the reservoirs, the waterpipe network is gradually being put in order again. Water supplies have already been restored in the north-western district and in parts of the central area. Owing to the large number of damaged house mains, all of which will have to be cut off before water is made available again, the restoration of the waterpipe network is being delayed. Owing to flooding of houses due to damaged mains a number of pipelines which had already been put in working order had to be cut off again until such time as repairs are completed. It is not yet known when the entire network will be restored as fresh cases of damage are continually being discovered. Repairs will probably be completed by 12th February.

City Transport Services:

Buses are not running owing to the shortage of fuel gas.

Most of the overhead tramcar cables have been destroyed throughout the central area and in West Biebrich. Route 8 between Wiesbaden and West Biebrich cannot be restored for the time being as various materials required for repairs are not available. The Wiesbaden-Biebrich - Schierstein service will soon be operating again. The Wiesbaden - Mains tramcar route is still out of action owing to damage caused in an earlier attack. Route 7 cannot be operated for the time being owing to rubble and the complete destruction of overhead cables.

(f) Public Buildings

1st C.D. Sector:

The Reichsbank building at 21 Luisenstr., the city insurance office at 1 - 3 Marktstr. and the schools office were completely destroyed by a mine.

The Wiesbaden bank building at 20 Friedrichstr., the town hall in Adolf Hitlerplatz and the Municipal Economic Office at 19 Friedrichstr. were badly damaged by high explosive and incendiary bombs. The girls high school in Adolf Hitlerplatz and the Capitol cinema at 1 Taunusstr. were completely destroyed by high explosive and incendiary bombs.

The big hall at the Kurhaus was completely destroyed by incendiary bombs. The Deutsche theatre and the theatre and spring colonnade were severely damaged by a mine and incendiary bombs.

The Ufa cinema in Wilhelmstrasse was damaged by incendiary bombs.

The Bonifatius church in Luisenplatz and the Markt church in Adolf Hitlerplatz were badly damaged by high explosive and incendiary bombs.

2nd C.D. Sector:

The Viktoria Baths at 2 Viktoriastr. were destroyed by high explosive and incendiary bombs.

RESTRICTED

The Nassau National Bank at 22-24 Rheinstr. was badly damaged by high explosive and incendiary bombs.

The Hebbel School was damaged by high explosive bombs.

The Lutheran church in Mosbachstr. was damaged by high explosive bombs which fell nearby.

3rd C.D. Sector:

The local sick fund building, the labour exchange, the Manteufel school, the Bluecher school, the Bleichstr. and Boseplatz school, the C.D. branch headquarters and the local headquarters buildings of the NSDAP (Westring, Westend and West) were either completely destroyed or badly damaged by high explosive and incendiary bombs.

4th C.D. Sector:

In the city hospitals two buildings were badly damaged by high explosive bombs and another two were gutted.

The Stiftstrasse school and the local branch of the Hitler Youth in Herbert Norkusstrasse were completely destroyed by high explosive and incendiary bombs. The headquarters of the 80th Regional Sub-Division of the Hitler Youth at 17 Geisbergstr., the eye clinic, the Nerotal sanatorium, the Riederberg school, 28 Philippsbergstr. and the youth hostel at 19 Haendelstr. were badly damaged.

5th C.D. Sector:

The south wing of Biebrich castle was burnt out. The customs building was completely gutted. The Riehl school and the Oranier memorial church were badly damaged by incendiary bombs.

8th C.D. Sector:

The Catholic church at 8 Friedenstr. was completely gutted.

The Muehlgasse school was slightly damaged by incendiary bombs. All the windows were broken by mine blast.

(g) Houses

Owing to the large number of incendiaries dropped and the duration of the raid, it was some time before civilians began to fight fires. This activity was further impeded by the breakdown of the water supply. Thus, roof fires were able to develop into house, street and area fires very quickly. No fire storms developed. Water was in particularly short supply in areas of the city situated on high ground, especially in West Bierstadt, Kloppenheim and Dotzheim.

(h) Farm buildings

In the suburbs of West Sonnenberg, Bierstadt, Dotzheim, Frauenstein, Rambach and Igstadt a large number of barns and other farm buildings were damaged by incendiaries.

At fifteen nurseries in the Saarstr. and Blierweg area in West Schierstein considerable damage was done to hotbeds, greenhouses and other buildings. Some of the plants were killed by the cold.

R E S T R I C T E D

Fires:

Major fires: 500

Medium fires: 240

Small fires: 700

"Block" fires (covering one or more blocks): 23

As a result of massed dropping of incendiaries "block" fires developed in Neubergerstr., Kapellenstr., upper Nerotal, Franz Abtstr. and Stiftstr., Kranzplatz, Webergasse, Wilhelmstr., -Kranzplatz, Baerenstr., Muehlgasse, Burg-Wilhelmstr., Faulbrunnenstr., Buelowstr., Emserstr., Klarenthalerstr., Elsaesser Platz-Blumenthalstr., upper Dotzheimerstr., Oranienstr., Moritzstr., Adolfsallee, Wilhelmstr and Kleine Wilhelmstr., Dotzheimerstr., West Bierstadt, Sonnenberg and Igstadt. Fire-watchers were greatly impeded by the duration of the raid and the mixed dropping of high explosive and incendiary bombs, some of which contained explosive charges. The breakdown of the water supply was an added difficulty. Emergency water tanks (capacity three cubic metres) had been emptied at the beginning of the year owing to the long period of cold weather. In spite of these difficulties fire-fighting units of the Fire Police and C.D. Police, the Army and Air Force, the Special Administration and Works C.D., the Party, the Reich C.D. Association and the fire watchers carried out their work in an exemplary and energetic manner. Their unsparing efforts prevented an area fire and fire storm developing in the Altstadt district.

Emergency Water Supply:

Owing to the breakdown of the normal water supply system during the raid all of the fire fighting units engaged were obliged to fall back on their own resources. Water was provided for four motorised C.D. companies and 23 fire-fighting squads on 3rd February, for two motorised C.D. companies and 14 fire-fighting squads on 4th February and for eight fire-fighting squads on 5th February. Streams and canals proved very useful and provided an adequate supply of water. From about 1300 hours on 4th February some of the units engaged were employed on replenishing emergency water supplies. This water could still not be obtained from the mains and had to be pumped from streams and canals. The available emergency water supply was adequate in the central district of the city. However, in districts and suburbs situated on high ground not enough water could be brought up by vehicle. There was no need to bring in fire-fighting forces from neighbouring cities and this would probably not have been possible in any event owing to lack of fuel.

Other Damage:

A barge anchored in the Rhine in C.D. Sector 5 was hit by incendiary bombs. The barge caught fire and sank.

The Post Office building in Rheinstrasse was slightly damaged by high explosive bombs which fell nearby. Water from a damaged main flooded the Post Office yard and the cellars, in which the main switchboard is housed. In addition, an emergency water tank in Luisenplatz containing 1,400 cubic metres of water was destroyed by two direct hits. The water flowed down the steep incline of Rheinstr. and some of it flooded into the Post Office. The main switchboard was under water for about twelve hours. Two Army fire engines were called in to pump out the water, which was transferred to the emptied emergency water tanks near the main post office. Owing to the flooding communications in Wiesbaden and to the west were interrupted temporarily. The other installations were not damaged.

R E S T R I C T E D

A splinter-proof shelter in Coulinstrasse sustained medium to heavy damage from high explosive bombs which fell nearby.

The following shelters were also damaged:

22 Klarenthalerstr.	lighting put out of action
86 Dotzheimerstr.	entrance blocked by rubble
61 "	" " " "
7 Goebenstr.	lighting put out of action
42 Bleichstr. (school)	brickwork damaged by HE bomb
22 "	entrance blocked by rubble and doors destroyed
Boseplatz	entrance blocked by rubble and surface water flooding
85 Rheinstr.	lighting put out of action
41 Schwalbacherstr.	entrance blocked by rubble
Bluecherplatz	trenches slightly damaged by HE bomb

The Fresenius Laboratory at 15 Kapellenstr. was hit by several incendiaries and destroyed. The chemical warfare research department was also destroyed.

In addition, medium to heavy damage was caused by high explosive and incendiary bombs to the Johannisstift hospital at 76-78 Plattestr., the St. Michael hospital at 5 Plattestr., the Evangelical buildings at 2 Plattestr., the Walkmuehle dye works, the Lahnstr. school, the Zieterring school, the Kastellstr. school and the cattle-shed in the Platter.

Aircraft Crash:

Parts of an aircraft were found in the 1st and 7th C.D. sectors in Bingert- and Verdunstrasse and in Sonnenberger- and Parkstrasse. Seven dead airmen (Canadians) were found in the vicinity of the Spa. GAF station Erbenheim and LGK XIV were informed and were requested to collect the aircraft parts and the dead airmen. The aircraft was not seen to crash during the attack either by observation posts or casual observers. Apparently it exploded in mid-air.
